Abstract (Document Summary)

The results from a study of the potential impacts on the motor carrier industry of 3 logistics strategies that have produced fundamental changes in shipper acquisition and management of motor carrier service are reported. The 3 strategies are: 1. a reduction in the number of motor carriers utilized by individual shippers, 2. the use of electronic data interchange (EDI) between shipper and carrier, and 3. the use of long-term contracting for motor carrier service. The shipper logistics strategies investigated in the study have been widely adopted by the survey respondents, and respondents expect to increase their use of each strategy over the next 5 years. There is evidence that the strategies are positively correlated, with the EDI-carrier reduction and carrier reduction-contracting relationships appearing to be stronger than the EDI-contracting relationship.
